235	Marvel Blazing Skull Custom Made 5" Figure This belongs to a collection of custom-made figures. Hand painted. Appearing in just five issues of Mystic Comics back in 1941-42, The Blazing Skull's grim visage would prove an unforgettable one. Reporter and pacifist Mark Todd was caught in a Japanese barrage while reporting in China! Taking shelter in a cave, Mark encountered the mysterious Skull Men - a tribe of mystics with burning skulls where their heads should be. They taught the outsider their ways, and he returned to the west with a new mission: battling Axis agents in a burning skull mask. Thus was born the Blazing Skull, whose visage made quite the impression on a young Roy Thomas and Gary Friedrich - inspiring the creation of Ghost Rider. Figure measures roughly 5" tall and is in overall great shape but does have portions of wear present as exhibited through paint abrasions. See photos for details and condition.

241	Marvel Armless Tiger Man Custom Made 5.25" Figure This belongs to a collection of custom-made figures. Hand painted. Marvel Mystery Comics #26 introduced one of the strangest of Marvel's wartime supervillains: Armless Tiger Man. Eric Hertz was a worker in a German factory who lost his arms in an industrial accident. Training himself to get by with his mouth and his feet, he developed a pathological hatred of all things mechanical and set out on a war against factories, vehicles, and anything with gears. Captured by Nazi authorities, they realized that this loon would be as happy carrying out his crusade in the U.S. as anywhere. Dropped into enemy territory, he turned his deadly legs and jaws to
